Luebeck is a busy commercial town on the Baltic and formerly head of the Hanseatic League. The market place shown in the picture contains many ancient and interesting buildings including the Town Hall, dating from 1383, and the church of St. Mary founded in 1276—1310. The latter owes its size to the ambitions of the citizens to have this church larger than the Cathedral of the Bishop. It is 385 feet long and 186 feet wide, whilst its towers are 410 feet high.
